

About Phunsites

Welcome to phunsites.net!

So while driving by, you might be wondering what phunsites.net is about?

This website dates back to 1999. At that time, the initial motivation was just to build a website and get some web design practice. While I thought this to be fun, the name of phunsites (as for "website made for fun") in an obviously leet'ish spelling was born. The weird name seems to make people to remember it better. Honestly. ;-)

Well, after all these years, phunsites in it's pseudo-133t spelling style may look awkward and childish in retrospect, however the content is not all. The website as of today covers several areas such as ...

- a technical blog by the name of PHAQ covering various areas of IT, networking and software development.]
Knight Industries.ch, a website covering my activities on building a full-scale, full-featured and full-fledged K.I.T.T. replica]
Phintage Collection, an online browsable catalog of my collectible vintage computers]
Raiders of the Lost Camel, a documentary on our famous Team 36 joining the charitable Allgäu-Orient Rallye 2014]
The Phunsites Package Builder, an online web service, where FreeBSD? packages can be requested for the Raspberry Pi / armv6 platform]

Oh, and if you like retro computing, phunsites.net is also running on gopher (view site via proxy for browsers lacking gopher support)
